ANNOUNCER: "The Central Intelligence Agency is getting its share of praise and blame in the wake of last week's revelations that the agency has secretly been giving financial report to student groups in this country and abroad.

"Representative Wayne Hays of Ohio has called the association contemptible. He says the financial links were known to both the White House and the State Department but that the responsible officials were seemingly content to let the arrangement continue.

"Senator Milton Young of North Dakota, ranking Republican on the CIA Watchdog Committee says the good the agency does far out weighs any errors."
